The principal of a Bedford school faces a pair of charges after police say she fired her weapon inside her school. The Bedford Police Department responded to a shots fired call at the Hillside Elementary School on Thursday morning. When police arrived they found 29-year-old Inga Schiavone, who is the school's principal, inside the building with what appeared to be a gun. Police say they recovered a loaded .380 handgun and two spent rounds from inside the principal's office. Sources say there was a dispute between the two women but they were not separated. Police say Schiavone was arrested and charged with endangering the welfare of a child. She was later released on a $5,000 bond. According to court documents, Schiavone had a permit for the firearm and had it at her school.

The polymerase chain reaction (PCR) has been shown to be highly effective in the amplification of specific nucleic acid sequences. PCR is a method for amplifying a section of DNA, or cDNA, using a thermostable DNA polymerase. Two DNA primers, which are complementary to sequences on opposite strands and flank the DNA region to be amplified, are added to a reaction mixture along with the DNA template. The reaction mixture is thermally cycled and the DNA polymerase extends the primers to create complementary DNA strands. Thermal cycling is repeated to amplify the template and yield a high concentration of the target DNA. Typically, PCR amplification is carried out in volumes of 10 to 100 microliters. Because of its sensitivity and specificity, the PCR reaction has become a standard procedure in the diagnosis of inherited genetic disorders and in the detection of microbial and viral infections. In PCR, an "amplification primer" is a DNA oligomer (typically 20-30 bases long) that is complementary

What's New In Desktop Timer?

Linux under Wine with Compiz. Desktop Timer is a software tool, developed specifically so as to help individuals activate an alarm when a predefined period of time ends. This utility is portable, meaning you can easily bypass the installation process. As a result, the Windows registry is not going to be affected by this app in any way, and there will be no leftovers upon its removal from the hard drive. Aside from that, if you drop the program files to a portable storage unit (USB flash drive), you can use Desktop Timer on any computer you can get your hands on, by simply clicking the executable. The interface is clear-cut and highly intuitive therefore, allows even people with no experience with computers, easily find their way around it. You can input the time period from which to count down, by clicking the "Set" button and by using the left and right arrows on the keyboard, as well as the digits. The maximum time period one can set is 99 hours and 59 minutes and seconds. The "Start" button commences the countdown period, while it is also possible to reset the time, or hide the clock in the system tray, so as not to become obtrusive. If you click the systray icon, a context menu pops up, which enables you to load a new alarm, loop or test it, exit the program, as well as access the online Help contents. As long as you place a WAV file in the same folder with this utility, you can easily use it as a new alarm. You can use items from your hard drive, or download some from the developer's website. All in all, Desktop Timer proves to be an efficient piece of software. It does not require many system resources, it can be easily hidden when not needed and response time is very good.

Q: How to force the value of an input to be an integer I have this form that checks if a date is too old by comparing the date of the input to current date. I want to make sure that if the user enters non-numeric values, the input is changed to a number. Now, I used `$("#date").val(Number($("#date").val()).toString());` to force the input to change to an integer, but it doesn't work. When the form loads, the value is "1.04.01", but when I change the date and press "Submit", the value is 1.04. I want to have it as 1.04. I can't change the database format because my date format has to stay "YYYY-MM-DD". How can I fix this? `$(function() { $('#`
